

Kutztown University Policy ACA-017

400-Level Courses

A. Purpose

The purpose of this policy is to explain which undergraduate students may take 400-level graduate courses.

B. Scope

This policy applies to all 400-level courses, all undergraduate and graduate students.

C. Key words and phrases:

300-Level Courses – undergraduate courses at the highest level of difficulty.

400-Level Courses – courses that may be taken by undergraduate and graduate students; if taken by an undergraduate student, the course is considered to be an undergraduate course; if taken by a graduate student, then the course is considered to be a graduate course.

500-Level Courses –graduate courses that may be taken by undergraduate students only by special permission.

D. Policy & Procedure(s)

Courses at the 400-level are designed to be flexible to the needs of students and programs. By definition, they are at a higher level of difficulty than 300-level courses and at a lower level than 500-level courses, but 400-level courses may be used or required for either undergraduate or graduate degree programs, depending on the curricular requirements of the degree program.

Courses at the 400-level that are taken for credit in an undergraduate program cannot be used or repeated for credit in a graduate program. However, 400-level courses may be used for credit as part of a combined bachelor's / master's program.

Individual master's programs may limit the number of 400-level credits that can apply to the degree or require a specific number of 500-level credits for the degree. Students should consult with their advisors before taking 400-level courses.
